Background

To ward off the adverse impacts of the mounting global financial crisis on China, to promote stable and rapid economic growth, and to further expand domestic demands, the Chinese government has decided to invest, by the end of 2010, up to 4 trillion RMB on infrastructure, public transport, ecological environment, etc., and the Chinese government also planed an extra 10 billion investment on transport infrastructure projects before the end of 2008, of which western highways and rural roads are two major aspects.

To promote the road infrastructure construction and maintenance in Asia, and to form a unique platform for those who are interested in investing in Asia, the Organizing Committee of China Road Summit 2009 invites you to join together with the world's leading road construction and maintenance executives, policy makers and international financiers meet at Asia's important road event and one of the best resources for financing, new business, and industry news.

Expect unparalleled networking opportunities with potential clients from all over the world. The China Road Summit 2009 brings together a selected group of senior decision makers from the authorities, planning, design, construction, maintenance, management, operation, and contracting companies of global road, tunnel and bridge industry, equipment, technique and services providers, and national oil companies, asphalt refiners, producers, traders, shippers and consultants. Do not miss this excellent opportunity to be part of this exclusive gathering of high level executives.
